

YON NA, PHD

ORGANIZATION DEVELOPMENT
ORGANIZATIONAL PSYCHOLOGY

Yon Na is a leadership and organization development professional with 20 years of corporate experience. She has worked with some of the most admired companies on the planet: Warner Bros. Entertainment, The New York Times, Microsoft, Johnson & Johnson.

Yon earned her Doctorate in Organizational Psychology from The California School of Professional Psychology at Alliant International University. Her dissertation study focused on the experiences of Asian immigrant women and their journeys into corporate leadership.

Click text below for more information

As a Director of Organization Development for Warner Bros. Entertainment, she focuses on interventions that enable leadership and employee effectiveness.

Yon is a contributing writer to Fairygodboss, a life and career site that advances working women.

Yon has visited 22 states in her Airstream trailer. She chronicles experiences on the road on a travel blog called buttersandbambi.

Created and launched a leadership development workshop for Asian women centered on identity development and leadership style.

After living in Seoul, Korea, San Francisco, Santa Barbara, Seattle, and New York, Yon, her boyfriend, and their two dogs now call Los Angeles home.

Yon says, "My hope is that through my research and contribution to the field of organization development, I will inspire others to live a courageous and meaningful life."

Connect with Yon

